The San Francisco Bay Area, home to scores of innovative chefs, such as Daniel Patterson (Coi), Melissa Perello (Frances) and Thomas Keller (The French Laundry), made a strong showing, earning 13 places on the list. Chicago chefs Stefanie Izard and Graham Elliot helped the Windy City grab six awards, for second place. Meanwhile, New York City trailed with five wins, including Amanda Cohen's Dirt Candy. Seattle and the greater Boston area each boast five recipients, including a win for Boston's Barbara Lynch. Farther west, the Twin Cities scored a grand slam with four standout spots on the list: Hauteland, Heartland Restaurant and Piccolo. Arizona, Colorado, Philadelphia, Oregon and South Carolina, among others, are also represented.

"With great reviews from scores of foodies comes great responsibility, and these restaurants embrace that responsibility in powerful and creative ways," says Caroline Potter, OpenTable's Chief Dining Officer. "These restaurants have been singled out for being able to satisfy the folks for whom dining is practically sport -- those avid, passionate eaters, often armed with cameras who take careful notes and relish every bite. While the restaurants on this list specialize in different cuisines and styles of cooking, each winner is pushing a boundary, maintaining an ethic, and practicing perfection with each dish."

Based on feedback collected from OpenTable diners between September 2010 and August 2011, the following 50 restaurants, listed in alphabetical order, received the highest scores for Fit for Foodies from OpenTable diners.
